What Does Your School Do For You?

By Sierra Richards

Some of you may be in high school, middle, or elementary school. Maybe even college! Most of you are probably wondering.....what does your school do for you? Your question will be answered in this article.

All schools are stuffed to the brim with students. That is why there are teachers in the halls to make sure you get to class on time and to make sure there are no fights. That's right. Fights. But the teachers break them up immediately. If you are on the verge of causing a fight, they tell you to get to class. The teachers just make sure you don't get into trouble and ensure your safety. To get ready for opening day, the janitors clean the building top to bottom. No one wants to get sick on the first day of school! The teachers reorganize their rooms and develop new curriculum to make you smarter. The school library gets new books, DVD's, and videos every year. The government sends fresh food to the cafeteria. This way, you're eating good food. Your parents give a lot of support through being guest speakers, volunteering, or being a teacher themselves. The schools have fundraisers, field trips, and a few small parties every now and then. In elementary schools, the fundraisers pay for the playground and balls you play with. Sometimes they pay for the field trips. School dances and proms help boost the fun factor. So do after school activities like sports, drama club, or book club. There are a variety of clubs you could join.

Now you know how much the teachers help. See if you can help out in your school. The staff just might need a helping hand!
